WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—(Associated Press.)—The Senate committee on private lands and selections will meet to-morrow, and will probably decide the Montana case, or at least make a report. It is generally expected that the five republican senators will vote for the bill, and the four democrats will vote against it. The bill is for the purpose of making a report on the public lands in Montana, and is a measure of great importance. The bill is expected to pass, and will be a great victory for the republicans.

SISTER IRENE'S BIG FAMILY

Twenty Thousand Babies & no She First Tong Out the Basket.

For Home - New Occupies an Entire City Block - Six Hundred Babies With Her Constantly.

New York Sun

On a rainy, dreary October morning in 1860 the people in Twelfth street saw a curious little basket in the doorway of No. 17, and wondered why it was placed there and what it was for. All day it stood there and at night a light illumined it. Footsteps came to echo in the silent street, but still the light gleamed out over the little cradle, and after it was very late, straight up to its radiance crept a light with a white, delicate face and light-colored, downy hair. The basket was a wicker one, and the child was a white, which, with many fur-furled wings and a pair of feet, she left in the basket, and then, hurrying softly down the steps again, crouched in their shadow and was so still a little sharp cry rang out through the shadows. The door opened and in it flooded a light a sweet-faced woman in a red gown and black bonnet, lifted the white bundle to her shoulder, and the baby's face against her bosom, stepped back into the house, and the door closed between her and the cradling woman in the darkness. A slow glow through the night with her secret of guilt and wrong, locked in her own bosom. All night there came another, and all night to lay down her burden at the basket, with no queasy, and at the first faint light of the morning she took from the basket a child in the face of light from her doorway to take the helpless victim in to warmth and care. No matter how late the hour, how late the cry, she listened and answered. She would not let a penny with which to buy food for all the little ones, but before long the basket was empty, and the work went on. Ladies came in food, money, clothing, made gifts, and the work went on. The faithful Sister Irene and her nuns did the rest. At first people opposed the charity, arguing that it was a waste of money to increase crime by sheltering the perpetrators. Those were the days when the papers were full of charges against the children and when babies were left on the steps of charitable institutions whose charters did not admit their acceptance. But after a time the city fathers accepted the burden of the small amount of charity which the nuns offered.

The story of Sister Irene and her basket has been told many a time, but its far-reaching results are new. The houses in Twelfth street, the first of the city, were in the United States, and during the twenty years since Sister Irene lifted that first baby out of the basket more than 20,000 children have been taken by her to be cared for until homes could be found for them. The nuns, who were organized and the people accepted the state sanctioned, and now the asylum, with its various departments and hospitals occupies an entire block on Lexington avenue, between Sixty-sixth and Sixty-eighth streets. The main building, which is six stories high, accommodates 600 children and 300 nuns, but even as the work grows its environment in Twelfth street now this great building is insufficient in capacity, and 1200 babies are put out to nurse. When a baby dies in any poor family, the mother may receive, upon a doctor's certificate of health and responsibility, one of these little waifs to be nurtured as her own, for which she is paid a monthly salary of each month, on say day, the woman must bring the child to the asylum to pass the inspection of the sisters before she receives her monthly wages. If the child is very ill, it is taken to the hospital of the asylum for treatment and care. Of all the mothers, Irish, French, German and Italian, the latter bring back the healthiest, heartiest babies, and if a baby is delicate and puny, a few weeks of nursing by an Italian mother result in a healthy child.

Sister Irene is still at the head of this great work. She is strong, glad, peaceful face, look out from the black bonnet, is lightened by the perpetual winning smile which children love. She is a woman who seemed more proud of her little children, more swift to notice their charms of face or motion, more ready to praise their baby gifts of mind than she. It is a touching and beautiful picture, this elderly woman who is taken to the hospital of the asylum for treatment and care. Of all the mothers, Irish, French, German and Italian, the latter bring back the healthiest, heartiest babies, and if a baby is delicate and puny, a few weeks of nursing by an Italian mother result in a healthy child.

Observe, if you please, the swaying, sliding, when she is in the crowd, she is a woman who seemed more proud of her little children, more swift to notice their charms of face or motion, more ready to praise their baby gifts of mind than she. It is a touching and beautiful picture, this elderly woman who is taken to the hospital of the asylum for treatment and care. You have doubtless watched a panther pacing backward and forward in its cage. How like velvet is his step! How regular, how easy, yet full of repressed strength. Men who have devoted many years to the study of physical culture say a panther and a woman should get together in the same way. If you would walk well, girls, study the panther in the park, then go and do likewise. A good way to practice is to start on a fine, bracing morning for a straight three-mile stretch and cover it in half an hour. Wear warm wraps, but leave your corset at home. Corduroy makes an excellent walking suit.

A few days since I met a party of three girls in the upper part of Central park, one of them a girl who is a panther in the park, then go and do likewise. A good way to practice is to start on a fine, bracing morning for a straight three-mile stretch and cover it in half an hour. Wear warm wraps, but leave your corset at home. Knocked Out. "What can this be my friend?" asked a man who was walking down the street. "I'm the president of the Squeakwalk bank that you're the son of! Want anything more, Sonny?"

TO TREAT THE RABIES.

Dr. Paul Gibber Has Commenced a Great Work in New York.

The Formal Opening of the New York Pasteur Institute - Began Last Night by the Great Inoculation.

Dr. Paul Gibber has formally opened the New York Pasteur Institute at 178 West Tenth street, says the New York Evening Sun. Dr. Gibber is an eminent member of the medical profession. He has been selected by the French government on several occasions to investigate the cause and treatment of epidemic diseases.

He has been selected by the French government on several occasions to investigate the cause and treatment of epidemic diseases. He has been selected by the French government on several occasions to investigate the cause and treatment of epidemic diseases.

While Dr. Gibber will be ready to treat all diseases in which the inoculation method has been found a preventive against fatal results, the chief interest attaches itself to the cure of hydrophobia. In dealing with this scourge he will follow the rules laid down by Pasteur, whose success in preventing the fatal consequences which often follow the bite of mad dogs is now universally acknowledged.

When an animal is bitten by a dog suffering from rabies, a period of incubation ensues, during which no unusual symptoms are visible. At the end of the incubation period, violent nervous convulsions burst out. The animal is afflicted with partial paralysis and is unable to swallow. It turns in loathing from its accursed food and devours earth, rags, or anything else he can swallow. The throat swells, and all food is rejected. At the end of the incubation period, the animal dies either by choking or heart failure.

For the past twenty years M. Pasteur has devoted himself to the study of the cause and prevention of hydrophobia. His success in Jenner's vaccination method in smallpox. The discovery of vaccination reduced the average number of deaths from smallpox from 300 in every 1000 cases to 25 in every 1000 cases.

A large part of the work is still dependent upon voluntary contributions, and something of the expense involved in the cure of hydrophobia is still dependent upon the generosity of the public. The ladies who have interested themselves in the work to many years ago are actively engaged in it now. The time and skill of the nuns is still at the service of the foundations. Always at the desk on pay day are Mrs. Paul Theobald and Mrs. J. M. Fowler, two of the earliest patronesses of the charity, who devote an entire day each month to their work.

HOW A WOMAN SHOULD WALK. She Should Imitate the Tiger in Her Movements. New York Herald.

Have you noticed how few women walk gracefully nowadays? It is unusual to see a woman carry her head and shoulders well and step out freely with a poetical grace of movement. The majority waddle, strut or bounce. The school girl trips or hurries along head forward. The loitering shopper goes on her way with a lolling step. The young woman studying art, music or for the drama leans her upper body back and looks down at her feet. The athletic club member walks with a swagger, and the woman who carries a large bundle of goods walks with a lurching gait. The woman who carries a large bundle of goods walks with a lurching gait.

AN ACT OF HUMANITY.

How Bishop Beckwith Observed Decent Burial for a Spy.

His First Thought to Save the Judged Man's Life - The Gratitude of a Relative in the North.

Atlanta Constitution.

It was no uncommon circumstance during the war for a stranger within the lines of the enemy to be hunted for a spy. Frequently it happened on both sides that absolutely innocent men were hunted to give satisfactory information concerning themselves and not deserve. Even the rabble-rousers of the day were not immune from this. A striking example marked out for him. A striking example marked out for him.

It was during the last year of the Confederacy that a man was found loitering about General Polk's headquarters. He was unable to answer the questions put to him, and he was taken to the military prison. He was unable to answer the questions put to him, and he was taken to the military prison.

The treatment is therefore almost certain to be successful if the patient is placed under treatment before the incubation period, violent nervous convulsions burst out. The animal is afflicted with partial paralysis and is unable to swallow. It turns in loathing from its accursed food and devours earth, rags, or anything else he can swallow.

The practical success of Pasteur's method has been demonstrated by an English royal commission headed by Sir James Paget. Medical scientists all over Europe have likewise accepted his treatment as the only successful preventive of hydrophobia after the bite of a rabid dog.

For the past twenty years M. Pasteur has devoted himself to the study of the cause and prevention of hydrophobia. His success in Jenner's vaccination method in smallpox. PROHIBITION IN IOWA.

In Effects on the Fortunes of the People of Iowa.

An intense feeling has been created in Iowa. The people are divided into two camps. One camp is in favor of prohibition, and the other camp is against it. The feeling is so intense that it has led to many acts of violence.

her life freak has been discovered in York recently where Mrs Bryant White, a Baptist, a well known laborer, gave birth to one of the rarest forms in the catalog of monstrosities says the Christian Register. Two children were born joined together similarly to the famous conjoined twins. The connecting link was 18 inches long and three inches in diameter. It was attached to each body just below the ribs and was 100 times thicker than the muscular part of either part of the body.
